

Lunchtime Talk

Architectural Science - working across the disciplines

The Graduate School is pleased to present a talk by Professor Phillip Jones. Professor Jones is Chair of Architectural Science at Welsh School of Architecture, Cardiff University, UK (<http://www.cardiff.ac.uk/architecture/profile/phil-jones/>). He is also a Visiting Research Professor of the Faculty of Architecture in HKU.

Architectural Science provides a technical input to building design and construction, linking Architecture and Engineering, with its physical and social sciences, focussed on a design based approach. It works across a number of disciplines, and has the potential to impact on a number of current societal issues, such as climate change, energy use, public health and well-being. The speaker will discuss how he approaches this growing area of research through a combination of scientific and design based methods, linking research to industry practice and government policy.

Time and Venue:

November 2, 2016 (Wed), 12:30 pm – 2:00 pm, P501, Graduate House
